S SAVVY PRODUCER · GROWTH ECOSYSTEM

CROSS-SELLING & CUSTOMER JOURNEY PLAN

One ecosystem. Four clear ways to grow.

A practical guide to what belongs on Savvy Producer, Savvy Marketing, Savvy Leads, and Voxr AI—and how to move the right prospect to the right next step.

Prepared November 6, 2026
Strategic recommendations based on the local Savvy Producer materials and publicly available brand pages. Recommendations should be validated against current offers, ownership, and operating capacity before launch.

01 / EXECUTIVE RECOMMENDATION

Give each site one job.

Treat the four brands as a connected path through an agent's growth—not four copies of one broad sales pitch. Each site should answer one question, make one primary offer, and hand off only when another brand is a better fit.

Recommended promise: Savvy Producer helps agents understand and improve their business; Savvy Marketing builds or manages campaigns; Savvy Leads supplies opportunities; Voxr AI helps teams respond and follow up at scale.

Brand / destination	Primary role	Best-fit visitor	Primary conversion
Savvy Producer savvyproducer.com*	Trust, education, expertise, and guided entry to the ecosystem.	Independent agent or agency leader still diagnosing what will help.	Book a strategy call; use a practical resource; choose a relevant solution.
Savvy Marketing savvy-marketing.io	Managed marketing and campaign services.	Agency, call center, or producer wanting campaigns or operational help.	Request a campaign consultation or start a small pilot.
Savvy Leads savvyleads.io	Product catalog, territory discovery, and lead ordering.	Buyer who knows what lead type, territory, and volume they need.	Check availability, compare options, and order/reserve.
Voxr AI voxr.ai	AI calling, qualification, routing, booking, and follow-up software.	Team that needs faster, more consistent handling of inbound or purchased leads.	Book a demo or begin a guided product evaluation.

Resolve the Savvy Producer positioning gap first. The local homepage currently emphasizes lead and transfer offers, while the About page describes consulting, coaching, and sales-process support. Choose a primary role, align navigation and copy, and route product-specific intent to the appropriate specialist site. Keep Savvy Producer's brand as the trust and education entry point if that is the intended umbrella.

*Confirm the preferred canonical domain and exact legal/public identities for all four brands before updating links or policies. The local reference notes flag Savvy Marketing's public legal name, mailing address, contact email, testimonials, and outcome claims for confirmation.

02 / DO ALL FOUR SITES MAKE SENSE?

Four brands can make sense. Four full websites need to earn their keep.

Direct answer: the four offers are different enough to support four brands, but the available material does not yet prove that all four need equally large, independently marketed websites. Separate domains add clarity when each one has a distinct buyer, offer, conversion path, and accountable owner. Without that separation, they split search authority, analytics, maintenance, and trust.

Recommendation: Keep Savvy Leads and Voxr AI standalone: their catalog/checkout and software-demo journeys are distinct. Use Savvy Producer for expertise, education, and broad navigation. Savvy Marketing is the consolidation candidate: retain its service offer, but consider placing it under Savvy Producer until its distinct demand and ownership justify a separate acquisition site.

Site	Standalone case	Current recommendation
Savvy Producer	Human-led brand, education and consultation.	Keep as central authority and guide.
Savvy Leads	Distinct catalog, territory, fulfillment, and checkout.	Keep standalone; clarify inventory, terms, and ordering.
Voxr AI	Distinct software demo, onboarding, pricing, and support.	Keep standalone; cross-link when useful.
Savvy Marketing	Justified if service, audience, pipeline, and owner are distinct.	Resolve overlap; test a service section before scaling its own site.

Use these gates before investing in a separate site

Keep it separate when…

- Different buyer or job.
- Distinct offer, fulfillment, and CTA.
- Own qualified traffic and conversions.
- Named owner for upkeep and results.

Combine it when…

- Visitors cannot tell where to go.
- Offer and buyer duplicate another site.
- Little unique content, traffic, or sales.
- Extra domain fragments trust and reporting.

Decision to make now: Decide whether Savvy Marketing is a separate managed-service business. If yes, keep its site with a distinct owner and funnel. If no, move the offer under Savvy Producer and plan URL redirects after checking brand equity, links, and analytics.

This recommendation is based on available materials, not traffic or revenue data. Use a 60–90 day measurement period to confirm the final architecture.

03 / CONTENT ARCHITECTURE

What belongs where

Make the content useful on its home site, then link across only when the visitor’s next need is clear. Keep product details, checkout, and software claims on the site responsible for delivering them.

SAVVY PRODUCER · TRUST & GUIDANCE

Teach, diagnose, then direct

Founder expertise and practical agent education; sales-process and agency-growth resources; webinars; case studies with substantiated outcomes; a short “which path fits?” chooser. Primary CTA: Talk through your growth plan. Secondary links: buy leads, get campaign help, or see Voxr.

SAVVY MARKETING · DONE-WITH-YOU / DONE-FOR-YOU

Sell campaign outcomes and service

Live-transfer and appointment campaigns, past-book and retention campaigns, team webinars, implementation/support, qualification and campaign process, pilot plans, and proof. Primary CTA: Plan a campaign. Link to Savvy Leads for self-serve inventory; Voxr for software-led follow-up.

SAVVY LEADS · CATALOG & TRANSACTION

Help buyers choose and order

Lead types and availability, territory map/reservation, delivery method, filters, pricing, sample records, consent and provenance information, replacement/refund terms, and ordering. Primary CTA: Check availability / order. Cross-sell a follow-up workflow only after the buyer understands the lead product.

VOXR AI · SOFTWARE & PROOF

Show the workflow, not just AI

Product demos, use cases, integrations, onboarding, security/compliance explanations, transparent pricing or evaluation path, customer proof, and human escalation controls. Primary CTA: See a demo. Link to Savvy Leads for inventory and Savvy Marketing for campaign implementation.

Shared ecosystem standards

- Use one discreet “Savvy ecosystem” menu or footer with one-sentence descriptions and direct links; never bounce visitors through a generic hub by default.
- Use consistent logo, voice, support expectations, privacy disclosures, and naming. Explain which entity fulfills each order or software service.
- Give every page one dominant CTA and at most one contextual next step. Preserve the visitor’s current task and avoid interruptive cross-sells.
- Put testimonials, performance statements, lead-quality claims, and ROI examples beside evidence and context; obtain permission and substantiate before reuse.

04 / TRAFFIC STRATEGY

Send intent to the right front door.

Use Savvy Producer as the broad trust and discovery layer. Let each specialist brand capture visitors who already have a defined job to do. Paid traffic should land on a focused page for the exact offer and audience—not the general homepage.

Source / audience	Best destination	Content / offer	Next handoff
Founder LinkedIn, speaking, educational video, referrals; agents seeking guidance	Savvy Producer	Useful insights, agent-growth guides, webinar, short diagnostic, booking page.	Self-directed lead need → Leads; managed support → Marketing; follow-up problem → Voxr.
Searches for insurance leads, territory, product type, or lead ordering	Savvy Leads	Product/territory landing page, availability and delivery details, transparent order path.	Needs campaign setup → Marketing; needs contact automation → Voxr.
Searches for live transfers, appointments, retention, or campaign management	Savvy Marketing	Campaign-specific page, qualification process, pilot consultation and evidence.	Wants self-serve leads → Leads; needs ongoing follow-up tech → Voxr.
Searches for AI lead follow-up, voice automation, qualification, or CRM workflows	Voxr AI	Use-case page, short product demo, integration path and evaluation.	Needs lead supply → Leads; wants campaign operated for them → Marketing.
Retargeting and opted-in nurture	Return to the last relevant brand/page	Answer the unresolved question; show a case, demo, territory, or consultation appropriate to prior behavior.	Offer one next step; cap frequency and respect consent/preferences.

Channel priorities

- Organic: build helpful search pages around product, territory, campaign, and software use cases.
- Founder/social: practical education and proof → Savvy Producer resource or matching specialist page.
- Paid search: high-intent keywords → dedicated campaign/product/demo pages.
- Partner referrals: co-branded, clearly attributed landing pages.
- Email: consented education and customer lifecycle; keep B2B outbound separate, compliant, and targeted.

Traffic rules

- Do not send every ad or social post to Savvy Producer’s generic home page.
- Do not use Savvy Leads as the destination for software or managed-service ads.
- Use direct cross-links with a plain explanation of why the next site is relevant.
- Carry source, campaign, landing page, and prior site through the handoff.
- Optimize to qualified orders, activations, and retained revenue—not raw form fills.

05 / CUSTOMER WORKFLOW

One journey, with helpful branches.

A visitor should move from need → fitting solution → successful use → relevant next offer. The path should be reversible: keep the visitor's original goal easy to complete.

1. Discover. Visitor arrives from search, social, referral, event, or paid campaign. Record landing URL, referrer, UTM source/medium/campaign/content, and first-touch attribution.
2. Match intent. Use a short choice or focused landing page: "I need leads," "I need a campaign managed," "I need faster follow-up," or "I'm working on my agency." Don't require a long questionnaire before showing value.
3. Route to the right brand. Leads intent → Savvy Leads catalog/order. Managed campaign intent → Savvy Marketing consult/pilot. Automation intent → Voxr demo/evaluation. Broad or unclear need → Savvy Producer guide or strategy call.
4. Capture and qualify. Collect only what is needed to fulfill the request. Preserve first and latest source, need category, product/territory, team size or volume band, requested contact method, and relevant consent evidence.
5. Respond and hand off. Create/route the contact in the shared CRM (GHL, if selected as the system of record); assign a human owner and response SLA. Pass source and context across site/domain boundaries; do not make the visitor repeat details.
6. Convert and onboard. Complete order, consultation, or demo. Explain fulfillment, expectations, ownership, support, and next steps. Track activation, not just form completion.
7. Offer the next useful thing. After a Savvy Leads order, ask whether follow-up is the bottleneck → Voxr demo if yes. For a buyer needing campaign management → Savvy Marketing. For a Voxr customer short on inventory → Savvy Leads. For any customer needing broader sales/process guidance → Savvy Producer.

> Example: An agent finds a Savvy Producer guide on improving lead response, then chooses a Savvy Leads product. After the first order, a service check asks whether the agent can contact leads quickly. If not, offer a Voxr workflow demo. If the agent needs a team to run the campaign, introduce Savvy Marketing. Each handoff is tied to a stated need, not an automatic bundle.

CRM stages to start with

New · Routed · Qualified · Consult / demo booked · Order / trial · Activated · Success review · Expansion-ready

Only trigger phone, text, or AI voice outreach when the relevant consent, disclosures, suppression rules, and channel-specific requirements are satisfied and documented.

06 / MEASUREMENT & ROLLOUT

Measure the ecosystem as one business.

Keep brand-level reporting for accountability, then connect it to the customer journey so the team can see which first touch produces qualified customers and which next offer actually helps them.

Shared attribution fields

- First-touch source and date; latest-touch source and date.
- UTM values, referrer, entry page, campaign, and sending brand.
- Intent category, product interest, vertical, territory, and volume band.
- Consent/source evidence and requested contact method.
- Qualified, booked, ordered, activated, repeat purchase, and attached service/product.

Core scorecard

- Qualified conversion by source and landing page.
- Lead/order and demo-to-paid conversion.
- Response time, booking/show rate, and activation.
- Repeat order, cross-sell attach rate, and 30/60/90-day retention.
- Revenue and gross margin per customer/cohort and by acquisition source.

HighLevel's documentation distinguishes first and latest attribution and describes attribution capture on supported forms, calendars, chat, and order forms. Use this as a practical starting point, then validate cross-domain tracking and data persistence in the actual GHL setup. Source: HighLevel attribution guide.

90-day implementation sequence

Window	Work	Definition of done
Weeks 1–2 Align	Confirm brand roles, domain ownership/canonical URLs, legal entities, current product availability, audience, and claims. Pick one primary CTA per brand.	Signed-off message map; consistent naming and approved links; unsupported claims flagged.
Weeks 3–5 Clarify	Update Savvy Producer role and navigation; build/refresh focused landing pages on each specialist site; add ecosystem navigation and clear cross-links.	Each visitor can identify the offer and next step in seconds; no duplicate competing home-page offers.
Weeks 6–8 Connect	Standardize UTM naming, forms, GHL fields/stages, ownership and response SLAs; test cross-domain handoffs; instrument order/demo/activation events.	Contact context and attribution survive handoffs; teams see ownership and outcomes.
Weeks 9–12 Learn	Publish useful content and run small intent-based campaigns. Review qualified conversion, activation, customer economics, and support feedback weekly.	Scale only the channels and cross-sells that create retained, profitable customers.

Guardrails before launch

- Confirm the actual offer, price, inventory, delivery, and support promise on every destination.
- Review lead consent and provenance, privacy disclosures, suppression, and any phone/SMS/AI voice workflows with qualified counsel.
- The FCC states that TCPA restrictions on artificial or prerecorded voice include current AI-generated human voices. Do not assume an AI voice campaign is exempt; review consent and applicable rules before use.
- For commercial email, the FTC says CAN-SPAM applies to B2B email too; maintain accurate sender details, a valid postal address, opt-out handling, and required disclosures.

07 / SOURCES & ASSUMPTIONS

Basis for this plan

This is an operating strategy, not an audit of analytics, conversion rates, contracts, or current fulfillment capacity. Brand roles below are recommendations; verify them with the owners before changing published content or paid campaigns.

Local Savvy materials reviewed

Savvy Marketing reference notes (workspace, collected Oct. 29, 2026): positioning, offer paths, product categories, current public claims, and identity details flagged for confirmation. The notes describe managed live-transfer/appointment campaigns, lead/territory options, past-book and retention campaigns, team webinars, and Voxr AI. See local file site-assets/savvy-marketing-reference/README.md.

Savvy Producer About page (local about.html): presents founder experience and a broader ecosystem including Savvy Leads, Savvy Marketing, and Voxr AI; currently describes Savvy Producer with consulting/coaching/sales-development language, while the homepage emphasizes lead and transfer offers.

Public pages used for product and attribution context

Savvy Marketing · Savvy Leads · Voxr AI · Voxr features. Public page content and offer details can change; verify before publication or media spend.

HighLevel Support: Understanding Attribution Source (first/latest attribution and supported conversion actions).

> Before implementation: verify all four brands' official domains, legal entities, ownership/relationship disclosures, current capabilities, testimonials and performance claims. This plan assumes the sites are intended to work together as one customer ecosystem; it does not assume they are one legal entity or that every offer is currently available.
